NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1851.

In our Prospectus for 1851, we gave early notice and positive assurance, that this year's volume should very far surpass all previous efforts of Magazine publishers in this country. We shall not rest satisfied with any moderate degree of excellence in any department of this Magazine,

The experience of twelve years as publisher has, we trust, not been lest upon us, or been idly used since our return to this work, some eight months since. Deductions from those experiences and reflections upon the present state of our periodical literature—satisfy us that the voice of the people is now for a larger amount and a more se rious and thoughtful cast of literature. This demand it will be our grateful duty to supply. We have engaged eral prices for their labor, and it is for us and them to show whether America shall have a periodical literature of its own, worthy of the amplest approval and support.

Our next number will be very expensively and very splendidly libstrated. It is our aim to make "Graham," in the quality of its illustrations and the merit and quantity of its original literature, very far superior to any other magazine in the country. ORIGINAL ARTICLES.

BY W. M. THACKERAY, ESG.

Author of "Vanliy Fair."

With illustrations by the author. Part VIII 8vo. price 25 cents. The work complete in 2 vols. paper, $2; 2 vols. muslin, $2.50.

"As true to the life and bitingly satirical as "Vanity Fair."

[Southern Literary Messenger.

"No recent fiction seems to us to bear such intrinsic evidence of being drawn from 16s."

"Thackeray is custic in a stire, and at the same time witty and his morous, original and instructive. Fielding led the way in English works of theton painted from nature; and Dickers and Thickeray are worthy successors of the great latting of the English zovel. They who like to see this fielder and defects of hashonshe life held up to view by one who possesses the qualities of mind which become rowance, will read this work."

"This is the most chatty, keen, world knowing and world exposing acvel of the day. To us at is dealphtid.

"Though Thinke ray grass us ble high and low, it is always in a healthy tone and with a healthy moral. His characters, too, are drawn with great strength and individuality, reminding one of Smollet and Fielding, without a perticle of their valigarity. Captain Coxiqua is capital—Thackersy reals the brengue as well—and the Fokers is just as good; and them Major Fendennis is one of the most enquisitely drawn characters in Taylor's Bulletin.
